RELAYS OF GARMENTS.

It is Not Economy to Have Too Many Clothes at One Time.

It is a great mistake to have too many garments at one time. People who dress well at a moderate expense never do this. They have what they need, bestow good care upon their belongings and mend them when necessary; when their clothes wear out they buy new ones, but they never care to have relays of garments. One sometimes reads in the newspapers of wealthy brides having enormous trousseaux, fashionable hats, bonnets and dresses by the score. Such people are not to be envied. They only possess what they do not know what to do with.

They cannot wear out their own finery, and in the long run other persons—their maids or secondhand clothing dealers—are certain to get the reversion thereof. Fashionable garments very soon get out of date, and the more "stylish" they were when new the more remarkable they seem when the mode has altered.

So with regard to underclothing. Large supplies of underclothing are only an anxiety. They need constant looking after or they deteriorate in condition. If laid away for a long time they may become useless, because the figure of their owner may alter, and they are a great temptation to dishonesty.

Yet still good housewives are careful to have a sufficiency of underclothing, because it is an even greater mistake to have too few garments of one kind than to have too many. People who have exactly what they require for a change and no more always get into difficulties when their clothes begin to wear, because they seem to be constantly mending or needing to mend their garments. And it should be remembered that linen, cotton and flannel wear longer when they have an occasional rest between their periods of service, just as certainly as they deteriorate in quality through being of no service at all.—New York Journal.

No Confederate Supreme Court.
"It is a curious fact," said a New Orleans man, "that the Confederate congress never created a supreme court. The matter was before the Richmond congress, but no statute was ever passed authorizing such a tribunal."

"It was in a debate over this very topic in the Confederate senate that the personal encounter between Ben Hill of Georgia and William L. Yancy of Alabama occurred. The senate was in executive session. The Georgia senator was speaking in favor of the creation of a court of last resort whose powers should in a way be limited. Yancy looked on this idea with disfavor, and during the course of Hill's remarks he interrupted with the insulting statement that Hill had given utterance to a lie. No sooner had he used the offensive word than Hill, picking up an inkstand, hurled it with great force at his defamer. The glass struck Yancy over the eye, inflicting a severe wound, but doing him no permanent injury, although stories were long current that the blow finally caused his death."—Washington Post.
